“Economical Agriculture” or “Livelihood production”

Editor of this article “Mansoor Ansari” asks: which one promotes positively the national economic situation, and water and soil resources: economical agriculture or livelihood productivity?

He believes social, political and economical combination of rural with livelihood productivity will cause less profitability, loss of energy sources, and more poverty and hard life-situation.

Bank`s facilities with huge premiums and ruined rural agricultural industries never have no profit and welfare for these people.

Absolutely there is a visible differ between the price of wheat which is cultivated in 500 ha farmland equiped with modern and standard vehicles and the total price of wheat cultivated in one ha farmland with old and traditional system and vehicles. It`s a fact that weak farmer cannot compete with market and will confront with economical challenges and low income and welfare for his family.

Editor suggests: “If we provide modern agricultural vehicles for rural farmers and if we for grand agricultural unions in our rural regions we will face with more job for rural people and also we will go proceed successfully toward economical agriculture with long saving water and energy sources.
